A Good Odd Fellow.

Mr. Cutler, of 21 Lyons St., New Haven, Conn.—How He takes Life Easy now and How he obtained the Means to Regain his Health.

Mr Cutler, of 21 Lyons St., is a faithful Odd Fellow, and for forty years a member of Quinnipiac Lodge No 1 (the oldest organization of its kind in the State of Conn). He is a man much respected in New Haven Your reporter found him at his pleasant home on Lyons street one afternoon taking life easy "You see," he says, "I'm trying to make myself feel a little indisposed I presume it's the lingering results of a Lodge dinner which I attended a while ago down at the booth I have been, as many of my friends in New Haven know, a sufferer for years from indigestion and biliousness When I have indulged in too hearty food I've had to suffer at times extremely As a result I've had to place myself under my physician's care often, and I have taken a great many remedies, but I find after a thorough trial that Dr Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is the most excellent medicine I have ever had knowledge of for any of the disorders above mentioned It leaves no exhaustive effects but rather strengthens and regulates the digestive organs in a charming manner We keep it as a household medicine, and I have recommended it to many friends for it is an excellent preparation"

Mr Cutler is a man whose word can be depended upon His testimony is but a re echo of the words of thousands in New England who have received relief from the sole use of Dr Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY

THE CIMBRIA'S PASSENGERS.

Harrowing Stories Told by Some of the Survivors.

Among the passengers who arrived at New York, last week, by the steamship Westphalia, of the Hamburg-American line, were ten who had been saved from the disturned Cimbria The saloon passengers were Mr. Albert Attendorf and Miss Emilie Attendorf (brother and sister) Josef Curtis and a little girl, eleven years old, Feige Janoviz The child was alone and had been a steerage passenger, but kind-hearted Captain Barends placed her in the cabin, where the motherless, friendless girl became quite a favorite

AN AFFECTING SCENE

The Westphalia made fast to her pier at Hoboken about nine o'clock. Among those waiting to board the vessel was an elderly man with a sad and anxious face No sooner was the gangplank thrown forward than he was the first to mount, and as he reached the deck called out for little Feige Some of the passengers grouped on the side of the vessel made way for him Another moment and from a childish voice rang forth the name of "Father," and then the strong man and the little girl were locked in an embrace He kissed her again and again and every witness of the scene had a moistened eye. Feige's father was Mr Joseph Janoviz, who not long ago was expecting his sister with his child, but now could only greet the lone Feige, after her rescue, was utterly ignorant of where her father lived, all the papers messages say for her identification having been lost with her aunt All she could tell was that her father was in America and she was going to him The agents in Hamburg sent her on with the rest. Mr Janoviz, when the sad news was cabled here ascertained that his sister was dead but could not make sure whether his daughter had shared the same fate till some days after.

Mr Attendorf had been for ten years in America, in Omaha, and crossed the Atlantic some months ago to bring his sister over from Laudau Germany He gave the reporter a sketch of his experiences on the fatal night when the Cimbria went down He said it was about ten minutes to two in the morning when a frightful crash was heard that roused him from his sleep and also his sister "There was no time to lose," he continued, "even for putting on the necessary clothing When we reached the deck there was a scene of wild confusion, the passengers screaming and shouting and running here and there. How the boats were lowered I cannot tell. I only know that the second officer put me and my sister in one, and twenty-five minutes after there was no trace of the Cimbria The Sultan, after the collision did not wait. Her lights were visible for about half an hour after We had no provisions in the boat and from two o'clock until noon, when we were picked up by the Thetis, we had to endure the bitterest cold We saw the Thetis for two hours before she perceived us"

THE WAIF IN THE WATERS.

Mr. Attendorf went on to tell of the horrors of the situation when the boat first got away from the Cimbria, of the screams for help of the vain dashes made by struggling and drowning men and women as the boat, and of the difficulties they had of escaping an upset Miss Attendorf noticed two persons floating near and begged the third officer to take them in.

"Impossible," he said "Another one will sink the boat"

"But, oh! look, look! cried the young woman, "it's a child, save her"

"Yes" said the officer, "but won't make much difference," and the poor half drowned Feige was hauled into the boat That she managed to survive the cold and exposure was considered by all a miracle On board the Thetis she received the kindest treatment as, indeed, did all the saved They were landed at Cuxhaven whence they were forwarded to Hamburg, where they received from the steamship company one hundred marks on account of their passage.

Mr. Curtis has been a citizen of Michigan for thirty years, and was paying a visit to his old home in Mecklenburg He was saved in the same boat as were Mr. and Miss Attendorf, and was the last to enter it "The water," he said, "was already reaching the upper deck of the Cimbria as I swung myself into the boat At the same moment the officer in command cried out to me, 'Push off the boat, we have already four more than we can carry.' The boat was pushed off, and almost immediately the Cimbria sank Such a terrible picture as I saw upon her deck after the collision I never saw before, and never wish to see again. We had no provisions in the boat, and were ten hours drifting about, hungry, cold and weak. At Hamburg, the company gave me another passage I don't remember that any of the officers received any thanks for their efforts to save the passengers."

CLINGING TO THE MAST.

Johann Ganske is a young fellow, who had an awful time of it, but now is inclined to treat it as an ordinary experience. He is a farm hand, He said he was fast asleep on that memorable night, when he was awakened, not by the shock of the collision but by the screams of the other passengers. He jumped out of his berth, put on his wooden shoes and went on deck When he saw what the matter was he went below again to get a coat, when he found the steerage full of water and bolted "A big bale of the ship" He lost very little time in getting on deck once more, and saw some of the officers trying to lower a boat. The ship was then lying on her side He helped to cut the ropes, and down went the boat, getting half full of water. There were half a dozen Indians on the Cimbria, and one of them got into the boat with other passengers. Ganske was about to make an effort to reach the boat when he saw her turn over on her side and all in her went under. He thought there must have been twenty-five, but many of them reappeared and swam to a mast to which he himself had clung when the ship sank. Seventeen persons clung to that mast with all the tenacity that fear of death gave.

When the Sultan had gone off there was not a light to be seen; all was darkness, and waves after wave was dashing over them. For eleven hours he and several others continued to keep their hold, but many in despair succumbed. Many a cry of agony went up in those eleven hours, and stout-hearted as young Ganske was almost the thought at one time that he must let go. Some of the unfortunates were seized with cramps, he said, and asking piteously for help, would sink into the waves never to rise again. Others were seized with fits and convulsions, and dropped into the sea One poor man was slipping off when a stranger caught him and held him, but in less than an hour he weakened and both went down.

When morning dawned not a sail was in sight and the members clinging to the mast was fast diminishing Ganske thought that it was owing to his having on all his underclothing and his overcoat that he was able to stand the exposure They went drifting about till somewhere about noon, when a ship hove in view to gladden the hearts of the survivors It was the Diamond, which as soon as the mast and its human freight were seen lowered a boat and pulled to the rescue They anchored at the Weser lighthouse and telegraphed to Hamburg Next day a little tugboat took them to Coatmunde, where they stopped at a hotel, the proprietor of which treated them most generously. Of the seventeen who had clung to the mast only about half were saved

REPULSED FROM THE BOAT.

Robert Schutt is twenty-one years of age, a stoutly built, ruddy-faced young farmer His good natured face was clouded with care He had lost mother, brother (fourteen years old), and sister (sixteen years), who were bound for Buffalo And where one of his uncles was expecting them. Another uncle met him at Hoboken Schutt, it seems, had a desperate fight for life and was repeatedly denied the means of escape from drowning He, too, was asleep at the moment of the collision, and when roused, rushed on deck half dressed. All the boats were already in the water, and life preservers being never dreamed of, even if there were any. He saw there was nothing for it but to jump, and he did so striking out for a boat. Who was in command he did not know, but one of the officers drove him away. He was lifted on a wave and again found himself near the boat and clutched it Some of the sailors tore his hands from the gunwales and the boat left him behind. Feeling another wave coming he made a third and superhuman effort and again clutched the side. In his own words he "crept on to the boat," and the occupants feeling that they might venture to take him in, did so There were three officers and thirty nine men. No sooner was he taken in than another man caught the stern and was towed along In about an hour's time he said, the lights of an English ship were seen but just as they were being saved by its crew the poor man at the stern let go and was drowned

John M C Gildemeyer, a steerage passenger by the Westphalia told the reporter that he was in Hamburg when the survivors of the Cimbria arrived He was staying at an emigrant boarding house and thither came the saved Such a woe begone company, he said he had never seen Some were without caps others without coats and others without shoes and stockings, and all without a penny Yet the boarding house proprietor refused to give them a supper, to give them anything, in fact, without cash down Were it not for some kind hearted citizens who came forward and paid, they would have had nothing to eat

THE RAILROAD BILL.

There will be another hearing before the legislative committee at Augusta to-day in regard to the Bangor and Piscataquis Railroad extension bill, a strong argument in favor of the constitutionality of the measure was voluntarily prepared and sent to the committee yesterday by Hon. A. W. Paine, of this city. The utmost confidence is felt that the committee will favorably report the bill in accordance with the wishes of the people of Bangor as expressed through their city government and by a direct vote at the polls.

THE APPORTIONMENT.

The Congressional apportionment bill comes up in the House to-day the pending question being on Mr. Spofford's amendment to put Somerset in the Fourth and Washington in the Third District. This proposition was considered by the committee, but in deference to the earnest protest of Kennebec and Somerset against the separation of those two counties, it was rejected, and in the interest of harmonious adjustment, Mr. Leighton, of Washington County, waived its preference and joined in the majority report. The claim of Kennebec and Somerset to remain together will be appreciated by all of our people, as the relations of the two counties are very similar in their intimacy to those of Penobscot and Piscataquis. And when the Old Third District, with all its historic prestige, consents to be broken up in the new classification, it does not seem unreasonable for gallant Kennebec, with its banner Republican majorities, to ask to have the company of at least one of the counties with which it has so long been associated.

It has become evident that some votes will be cast for the Spofford amendment solely with the purpose of claiming in case of its passage that the report of the committee has thereby been overruled, and thus setting the whole subject afloat. But it is believed that the personal discussion among members has greatly strengthened the conviction that the committee's plan meets more of the conditions and satisfies more people than any other, and that the wisest thing to do is to adopt it.

The tribunal before which it was brought has quashed the indictment against Prince Napoleon, who has accordingly been set at liberty.

The Indiana Legislature is discussing a bill ordering a convention of fifty members, one from each Senatorial district, to draft a new Constitution for the State.

There was an expression of relief heard from every corner of the Senate Chamber when David Davis announced that the Senate, in Committee of the Whole, had completed its Tariff bill. How much more time will be necessary to finish the bill in the Senate no one ventures to predict.

Professor Sumner, of Yale, having asserted in a lecture in New York that women work on a tread mill in Willimantic for fifty cents a day, the Hartford Courant says that there is not a woman at work in those mills who earns less than six dollars a week, and that the average weekly wages is $6.50.

The long-expected consolidation of the two great telegraph companies has been accomplished at last, the Western Union having leased the property of the Mutual Union for a long term of years. Whether the public interests will gain or suffer by the change will be made apparent in process of time.

The youngest son of Mr. William E. Dodge is the son-in-law of Governor Marshall Jewell. On Friday his father died suddenly; on Saturday his father-in-law. His young wife, hurriedly summoned from the house in New York where her father-in-law lay dead was barely in time in Hartford to close the eyes of her dying father.

The great rubber works in the States of Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, closed Saturday, for an indefinite period, throwing out of employment about 8,000 persons. The reason for this action is founded upon the high price of the raw rubber, which is not warranted by the law of supply and demand, but is caused by the operation of cliques, existing largely in foreign countries.

The free-trade-tariff-for-revenue-only Democrats should hire Herr Most. A few evenings since he delivered an eloquent discourse to the workmen of Philadelphia in which he said: "You are told, my friends, that you receive twice as much for your labor as is paid in Germany, but I deny this, for not only are you compelled to do twice as much work, but the value of money here is at least 50 per cent less than it is in Europe." This sounds almost as natural as if a native-born free-trader had said it.

Maryland is one of the States where the Democratic party is in sad need of harmony. It is split into three factions, each of which is anxious to control the organization. A Governor is to be elected this year, and union or the appearance of it is recognized as necessary if the Democracy is to continue in control of the State. Governor Hamilton has pursued such an independent course and shown so much disregard of the wishes of the Democratic bosses that he has no prospect of a renomination if he wishes one. With proper organization and work the Republicans could make such an inroad upon the Democratic majority as to place Maryland in the list of doubtful States in 1884.

Springer, of Illinois, is very aggressive in the House and constant in his interruptions. He fell into the hands of Mr. Reed, of Maine, Thursday, from whom he received a severe castigation. In about two minutes Reed administered to Springer the severest castigation that that gentleman ever received. "You cannot have a plant," said Reed, "until after it grows; it cannot begin to grow until after the seed is planted; but what is the good of sowing the seed if there is no earth to receive it? Does the gentleman from Illinois catch my meaning? To make an impression a matrix is as necessary as a die. Now I do not suppose that I can inform the gentleman on this subject. I can tell him, to be sure, but the trouble is in making the connection at the other end. So to speak, there is no receptacle for the seed." This brought down the house, and Mr. Springer at the same time.

CORRECT THE RECORD.

Mr. Editor: In your issue of Saturday, Feb. 10th, in an article taken from the Lewiston Journal, you say: "Only eight Republicans, out of ninety-three present in the House, recorded themselves against the resolve. Penobscot, York, Kennebec, Aroostook, Sagadahoc and Washington counties, each furnished but one Republican vote against the passage of the bill." The facts are that the entire Republican delegation from Washington County unanimously voted in favor of the resolve, and if you would find a Republican legislator who would place himself on record against giving to the people the prohibition amendment, you must not only go outside of the party, but beyond the limits of Washington County.

Mr. Smith, of Jonesboro, whose name appears in your list as the Republicans in the House who voted against the resolve, is a thorough temperance man, and instead of standing in the depleted ranks of the anti-prohibitionists, has ever been a zealous worker in the cause, and never fails to give his vote on the side of right and justice, and is duly recorded in favor of the resolve. T.

[We are greatly obliged to our correspondent for calling our attention to the error we had copied, and enabling us to do justice to Representative Smith and the Republican delegation of Washington County. On examination it appears that the Lewiston Journal attributed the vote of Representative Smith, of Vinalhaven, a Democrat, to Mr. Smith of Jonesboro, a staunch Republican and Prohibitionist—ED. WHIG.]

PROTECTION FOR GAME AND FISH.

Mr. Editor: I would call the attention of our legislators and resident sportsmen, to the following article out from the "Forest and Stream," of New York, recognized authority among hunters and fishermen. Under our judicious game and fish laws, the moose, deer and caribou, the grouse and partridge, as well as the salmon, trout and other game fish, which had been nearly extenminated, are becoming more and more plenty, each year; offering such inducements to "visiting sportsmen," that Maine is known as the Sportsmens paradise.

They come from near and far, from South and West, at great expense, in many cases over a thousand miles, to "paddle their own canoe" in our Maine waters.

Some are gentlemen of leisure and and wealth, who can and do afford to spend time and money with us, while others are business men and clerks, good sportsmen all, who can leave their business but about two weeks in a year. While we oppose, emphatically, the proposed change in the law, we favor and recommend a change, that shall make the open season for killing moose, deer and caribou, from the fifteenth day of September, to the thirty-first day of December; both dates inclusive.

This we do in the interest of our "visiting sportsmen," as well as citizens who have large sums of money invested in camps, boats and wood-roads, and who should be equally interested with resident sportsmen, in the preservation of the game and fish of the Maine woods.

HOWARD VERNON.

PROPOSED MAINE SUMMER SHOOTING

(From the Forest and Stream.)

The present open season for deer, caribou and moose in the State of Maine is from October first to January first. There has been presented to the Maine legislature a petition to so amend the law as to make the open season for killing this game begin July first, thus extending the time by the addition of three months.

It is needless to say that this change is not wanted by the sportsmen of the State, but by the hotel and steamboat men and the guides. It is alleged in the petition that the time is now so short as to seriously "discourage" and inconvenience" visiting sportsmen, who, provided the discouragements and inconveniences are not removed, will be obliged to seek other fields of slaughter and renown. It is further alleged that with this change no special harm can come to the deer. This is beautiful logic; a summer shooting season is wanted so that visiting sportsmen may shoot more deer, and yet the deer are not to suffer therefrom. It is the unsparing of greedy men, who have regard for nothing save stuffing their own pockets with the proceeds of untimely game slaughter. They know very well—no one else better—that deer shooting in June and July means death to the mother doe and death by lingering starvation for the fawns. This is not the kind of shooting that respectable sportsmen ask for; it is not the kind they would tolerate; it is sought and defended only by the class of greenhorns and butchers who like to drive into a deer in the water while their "guide" holds the violin for them—and by these same guides, who have an eye for the almighty dollar and nothing else.

Maine has a rich store of wealth in her native game supply. Her recent wise and provident action in securing better care of this resource by the appointment of game wardens, and the way in which these officers have set about their task, have been among the encouraging signs of the times. The State has made a good beginning. It only remains for her to pursue the same course, without regard to the selfish and improvident demands of summer shooting petitioners.

Such a law as that proposed would be pernicious in the extreme. We cannot believe that it will be enacted by the Legislature. It would be a step backward, a sacrifice of the public good to the grasping greed of a few selfish men.

The proposition of these Maine petitioners is a very fair illustration of the unscrupulous, every-man-for-himself spirit that to a lamentable degree inspires the game legislation of this country. There is hardly a game law on the statute books to-day that has not been put there after a desperate conflict with such selfish and improvident clamorers for present gain; and also contains on its face some special clause or exception in favor of this class, and in total disregard of the rights and interests of the community at large.

This condition of affairs will continue just so long as the sportsmen of a State are content to leave game legislation in the hands of any and every man who cares to tinker at it for his own private ends. There ought to be in every State in this Union a live society of sportsmen, representing the whole State, and working together to secure a law framed for the common good.

WIGGINS EXPLAINS.

WHY HIS WEATHER PREDICTIONS WERE NOT VERIFIED.

An Ottawa despatch to the New York Herald gives an interview with Prof. Wiggins concerning his latest weather predictions:

"How do you account for the mistake in your calculations?" was asked of the Professor.

"I will tell you in a few words. The astronomical day begins at noon on the meridian of London, and our day begins at 12 at night. I overlooked this fact, so that the side of the earth presented to the planetary force was the opposite to that which I gave. I did not notice my mistake until this evening, so the storm fell on the Pacific instead of the Atlantic. I made a similar mistake before with the storm of last October, which was so heavy on the Philippine Islands, but corrected it, having discovered my mistake in time. This is the first storm prediction I ever made that did not take place. We will get the tail end of the storm yet. It will strike heavily on the east coast of Africa, but will be pretty well expended by the time it crosses the Atlantic."

"Your predictions have already attracted a great deal of attention, but do you not think that you will be the subject of considerable censure from those who have been influenced by your warnings?"

"I may expect it. Yet I am the only meteorologist whom the world has ever produced that the public paid to a single day for the fulfilment of predictions. They expect my storm to be all over the whole hemisphere at the same moment, and seem ready to condemn one single failure, treating me not as human but as divine."

"You evidently did not conspire with the elements, professor, to insure the fulfilment of your predictions?"

"No; I based my predictions on astronomical effects, and through the error I referred to have calculated the result. However what is to be is the world's gain. The failure of this storm removes a world of responsibility from my mind, for the storm I predicted for March has hung over me like a nightmare on account of the terror it has struck in the public mind throughout the world, as instanced by that pile of letters I have received, and, if this storm had happened, hundreds anticipating the March storm would have become insane through fear of its results."

"Will you now retire from the field as a weather prophet, professor?"

"Yes, as far as publishing letters in the newspapers goes."

The fact that the ballot-box stuffers in South Carolina are to be tried again in April is the occasion for the Charleston News to sound a shrill note of alarm. The cherished institutions are in danger it says, by which it doubtless means the shot gun and the tissue ballot, and the people are urged to stand solidly together and support "the good men and true" who are to be placed on trial. Mr. Dallas Sanders, the Government's counsel, a year ago is referred to by the News as "the Philadelphia lawyer with more brass than brains." The same paper also says that "the approaching trials will tax the patience and fortitude of our people to the utmost." The sympathy of the Nation will no doubt go out to "our people" in their trial for violating the law of the land.

The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean, writes: Senator Lamar's long threatened speech on the tariff furnished the Republican party a campaign document which will work great danger to his more cautious colleagues at no distant day. His speech was of the worst variety of the free trade heresy. He dealt with the labor question, running boldly against all the snags which his more subtle colleagues always endeavor to steer clear of. He attempted to show that the price of wages had nothing to do with protection, and as a matter of course did not succeed. He evidently has in mind as his text the doctrine laid down in the Constitution of the late Southern Confederacy, of which he was a bright and conspicuous ornament. This instrument declared that "no bounties shall be paid from the treasury and no duties shall be laid upon imports for the protection of any industry." This bid for British recognition of the Southern Confederacy embodies the spirit of Senator Lamar's speech. It will prove costly to the Democratic party.

A matter has finally come before Congress which has long needed Federal legislation. All sea captains entering or departing from New York harbor are obliged to take a pilot on board, at his own terms, to manage the ship. This man must be paid two or three times as much as he could get for similar services in any other port in the world, and very often he is not so skillful or competent as the captain himself. This, remarks the Tribune, is an imposition which the Chamber of Commerce as well as individual shipowners and merchants of New York have long protested against in vain. Nothing can be done at Albany. The lobby of the pilots there is too strong. Moreover, New York laws could not affect New Jersey pilots. The subject seems, therefore, to come properly within the power of Congress to regulate commerce. A bill has been introduced asking that this imposition be stopped at all ports. Such important measures as those touching the tariff and internal revenue taxation should not be delayed, of course, by the consideration of this matter. But among the minor subjects waiting for Congressional attention the one we have mentioned has a prominent place.

THE LIGHT HOUSE MATTER

Likely to be Referred to Congress

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12. The subject of changes in lights at Cape Elizabeth and at Matinicus Rock, on the coast of Maine, was again considered and referred to a committee. As the Board adhered to its former action regarding the discontinuance of one light at each of the points named it is probable the question will be referred to Congress for settlement

XLVII CONGRESS—Second Session.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb 12 The credentials of Mr. Kenna from West Virginia were read and filed. Mr Windom from the Committee on Foreign Relations reported a bill for the suppression of the opium traffic Mr. Blair introduced a bill to legalize the incorporation of a National Trades Union; referred to the Committee on Education.

The Senate on motion of Mr. Edmunds went into Executive session When the doors were reopened the Senate resumed consideration of the Tariff bill, the pending question being on agreeing to the amendment in relation to vinegar factories adopted Saturday in the Committee of the Whole on motion of Mr. Miller: Mr. Miller argued in favor of the amendment After a prolonged debate the amendment was rejected, by a vote of yeas 16, nays 33

Mr Miller, of New York, introduced as an amendment a bill to repeal an act relating to vinegar factories established and operated prior to March 1st, 1879, referred to the Committee on Finance. Mr McDill presented the majority report of the select committee appointed to investigate the affairs of the Collector of Internal Revenue in the 6th district of North Carolina Mr. Vance presented a minority report and both were ordered printed

The amendments made in the Committee of the Whole, to the internal revenue portion of the bill, having been considered the Senate proceeded to consider those made in the Committee to the tariff sections Mr Morgan, who had on Saturday demanded a separate vote, in the Senate, upon each amendment made in the Committee of the Whole, withdrew the demand in order to facilitate the progress of the bill

The provision for duties on goods manufactured from two or more material was amended so as to provide that such duty shall be assessed at the highest rates at which the component material of chief value may be chargeable In addition to disagree to the amendment made in the Committee of the Whole making the duty on soaps 20 per cent ad valprem, was lost and the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment made in the Committee of the Whole changing the duty on green and colored glass bottles, demons, jars etc, from 30 per cent. ad valorem to 12 cents a pound, was disagreed to. Mr Conger asked to have the paragraph embracing iron ore and pyrites reserved till to-morrow when he hoped to be able to present some assays which would show the injustice of the action taken on the subject, agreed to

Mr Morrill, with the concurrence of a majority of the Committee on Finance, proposed to strike out the pig iron paragraph and substitute one reading, iron in pigs, iron kentledge ore, spiegeleisen, cast and wrought scrap iron, or scrap steel, 3-10ths of 1 cent per pound

Mr Sherman moved to strike out the words inserted in this paragraph, by the Committee of the Whole, and insert iron in pigs, iron kentledge spiegeleisen, wrought or cast scrap iron, 3 10 of 1 per cent, but nothing shall be deemed scrap iron or scrap steel except waste or refuse iron or steel that has been in actual use and is only to be manufactured" After a long debate Mr Sherman's amendment was rejected, yeas 25, nays 29

Mr Sherman then offered an amendment changing the rate of duty from three-tenths of 1 cent per pound to 36 50 per ton, agreed to. The amendment changing the duty on bar iron from nine-tenths of a cent per pound to $18 per ton was agreed to. Mr. Mitchell moved to make the duty on nickel ore 20 cents per pound instead of 15, lost.

The Lumber Tariff Restored

The action of the Committee of the Whole in striking out lumber from the wood schedule of the Senate bill was disagreed to. Laths, shingles, pine clapboards and spruce clapboards, struck out in Committee of the Whole, were also restored at the rates in the original bill, the Senate refusing to agree with the action of the committee

Mr. Morrill, by instruction of the majority of the Committee on Finance, proposed to reduce the additional duty on sugars, not above 13 Dutch standard testing above 75 degrees by polariscope, from five hundredths to four hundredths of a cent per pound for every additional degree or fraction of a degree A vote on this motion at the suggestion of Mr Bayard was postponed owing to the absence of Mr. Kellogg, of Louisiana.

Mr Sherman offered the amendment of which he gave notice in the Committee of the Whole, laying an additional duty of 10 per cent ad valorem on sugars, etc, on which an export duty is levied by the country of their production. After some further remarks the Senate, at 10,10 P. M., adjourned

House.

Mr Hutchins, of New York, asked unanimous consent for the passage of the bill for the retirement of Alfred Pleasanton with the rank of Major General. Mr. Steele, of Indiana, objected. Several bills were introduced and referred as follows: By Mr. Morse of Massachusetts, for the sale of the Naval and Marine Hospital at Chelsea, Mass; by Mr. Ray, of New Hampshire, to promote the efficiency of the naval obsefvatory

The House at 11 25 went into Committee of the Whole on the Tariff bill.

Mr Kelley's motion limiting the debate to 5 minutes was agreed to. Mr. Tucker moved to reduce the duty on chains less than three eighths of an inch in diameter from 2½ cents per pound to 35 per cent ad valorem; agreed to. Mr. Anderson moved to reduce the duty on chains not less than three-fourths of an inch in diameter from 2 to 1½ cents per pound; agreed to.

On motion of Mr. Kasson, of Iowa, the old classification of steel ingots, cogged ingots, etc, was restored. After some debate, on motion of Mr. Carlisle the duty on screw rivets, screw nails, fence and wire rods, round or in coils, and hoops not lighter than No. 5 wire gauge and valued at 3½ cents per pound or less, was fixed at 30 per cent ad valorem. Mr. Carlisle moved to amend by imposing a duty of 30 per cent on iron or steel flat bars with longitudinal rods for manufacture of fencing wire; rejected.

Mr. Carlisle moved to reduce from 11 to 10 cents per pound the duty on iron or steel screws between one-half and one inch in length. After a discussion of this amendment it was lost. Mr. Tucker offered an amendment fixing the duty on screws at 45 per cent, lost. Pending further action the committee rose and the House took a recess till 7.30 P. M

When the House met this evening there was but a small attendance. The Legislative Appropriation bill was considered in the committee. Mr. Atkins, of Tennessee, moved to reduce the salary of the First Assistant Secretary of State from $4,500 to $3,500; lost.

Mr. Bayne, of Pennsylvania, offered an amendment fixing the number of internal revenue collection districts at 75; rejected. Mr. Holman, of Indiana, offered an amendment fixing the number at 60. Pending action the committee rose and the House at 10.30 P. M adjourned.

THE LATE EX-GOV. JEWELL.

Arrangements for the Funeral Services

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb 12. The funeral of the late ex-Gov. Marshall Jewell has been appointed for Wednesday. The services at the house at 11 A. M. will be private. The remains will be then taken, under charge of his old Staff and the Governor's Foot Guard, to the Asylum Hill Congregational church, where they can be seen by the public until 2.30 P. THE WATER STILL RISING.

The Kentucky River

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 12. The Courier Journal's special from Frankfort says: The Kentucky river has risen 7 feet since Sunday noon, and is now riding with a heavy drift runnings The water is within three feet of the wooden bridge which is in great danger of going away. This is the highest ever known on the Kentucky river.

Relief Measures

CINCINNATI, Feb 12 A meeting of the Chamber of Commerce to-day showed an utter prostration of business, only the merest necessities of trade being accomplished. There is no disposition to enter into anything of a speculative character. The President called the body to order and a resolution was adopted appointing a committee to collect money and provide for the relief of the sufferers.

On motion of Richard Smith the Chamber gave $5,000 to the Committee. Superintendent Maxwell solicited individual subscriptions and immediately had fully $5,000 more. The Common Council are called to meet to-morrow to organize relief measures Among the losses this forenoon was the drowning of 300 head of cattle. The work of removing the poor from tenement houses, or of furnishing them with provisions, must begin at once

All available skiffs and other crafts are busy moving goods and ferrying passengers at enormous rates The gas is completely exhausted and citizens are providing candles and lamps. The theatres will be equipped with electric lights The river was 63 feet 7½ inches high at 1 30 P. M and still rising.

Still Rising.

LOUISVILLE, Feb. 12 The flood here has reached the highest point of the rise of February 22, 1882, and is rising an inch and a half per hour. Business and navigation are practically suspended. No loss of life has been reported, but the damage to property on the river front is very heavy. The weather is clear and warm.

Driven from Home

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 12 The highest point of the flood of 1832 was reached this afternoon and is passed now. There is more than 36 feet of water on the Falls and 60 feet in the channel at the foot of the Falls, which is but two feet below the great December flood of 1847. The water is rising slowly and a great tide from the Kentucky river is to be added The houses along the river front are vacated and the drift is damaging them seriously.

It is estimated at the shipping port and Portland that 1,500 persons are homeless Most of them are poor and great suffering exists. The losses aggregate $5,000 in the city proper. Heavy damage has been done by stoppage of work in the factories, and 2,000 men have been thrown out of work.

The Louisville Hotel Company opened a free lunch house for the women and children sufferers to-day, which will be maintained during the flood. The east-bound point in the eastern part of the city, a water barrier protecting thousands of homes, is weakening. If it breaks no estimate can be made of the suffering and damage that will follow.

A River Patrol.

CINCINNATI, O, Feb. 12 The river is now rising more rapidly than it was this afternoon. At 10 o'clock to-night it had reached 64 feet and 2½ inches. In view of the exposed condition of property and the inadequacy of the police force to properly guard the flooded district it was determined to call for help of the militia. A river patrol has been organized to watch the flooded district and give relief when needed

The troops will be paid to assist the police and the Committee will expend not more than $1,000 per night in this service. There being no gas the police have been ordered to arrest all suspicious persons on the street at night. But little mercy will be shown criminals found taking advantage of the present situation. Father Cusack, pastor of the Catholic church, opened it to the homeless and 300 persons are sleeping there The station houses have been filled with beds for the accommodation of persons driven from their homes. No accidents have been reported.

Later.

The flood of 1832 is now surpassed Taking the most liberal standard it has reached 64 feet 3 inches and at 11 o'clock to-night it stood half an inch above that and was still rising. Reports from above indicate the river is rising at Wheeling and falling at Marietta. It will probably continue to rise here to morrow.

The people of Lawrenceburg at last reports were virtually helpless, lacking food and unable to procure any. Telegraph and telephone lines are down and there were no means of communication Arrangements have been made here to mount fire engines on flats in case of fire in the flooded district.

BUSINESS TROUBLE.

Suspension of the Bay State Iron Company.

BOSTON, Feb. 12. The Bay State Iron Company, which has extensive works in South Boston and Fort Henry, New York, has suspended payment. S. G. Simpkins is President and J. Avery Richards, Treasurer. The last official statement showed a liability of $850,000 and quick assets of only $450,000. The firm has been borrowing money recently on western railway bonds, but a recent decision of a western Court has given preference as to claims roads to the bonds held by the State over those held by persons or corporations, and in view of this the banks here will have been loaning money to the Iron Company decline to do so any longer.

The officers of the company then stated upon the stockholders to help them out, but they refused any more money, and thought it better for their interests to close up and sell out. The plant is worth $100,000,000. The liabilities will probably reach three-quarters of a million, and by good management, it is believed, all parties interested, the creditors will eventually suffer no loss.

Highwayman in Quod.

Miss Christina Isherwood, daughter of Chief Engineer Benjamin F. Isherwood, U. S. N., who lives at 111 East Thirty-Sixth street, was robbed of her purse on Jan. 11, while she was descending the steps leading into the Fourth avenue tunnel at Thirty-Eighth street. The man who snatched the purse from her hand pushed her down as he ran up the steps and escaped. Detective Adams obtained an accurate description of the highwayman, from Miss Isherwood, and presently learned that William Barlow, an old English thief, answered the description perfectly. A pair of ear-rings were part of the contents of the stolen purse. The detectives learned that similar ear-rings had been pawned for $3 on the day after the robbery. The man answered the description of Barlow, and, on Friday, the detectives arrested Barlow and Peter Sheern, who was in his company at the time. The latter said he had seen Barlow sell a pawn ticket representing ear-rings, to William Reed, night bartender in a saloon. The detectives, Saturday evening, paid a visit to Reed, who at once acknowledged buying the ticket from Barlow, adding that having no use for the ear-rings, he had pledged them again with Pawnbroker Silverstein, at 10 Sixth avenue. Detectives Adams, Langan and McGuire went to Silverstein, who gave up the jewelry, which was at once shown to Miss Isherwood and identified by her In the meantime Miss Esherwood had identified Barlow as the highwayman.

INDICTMENT VS THE MAINE CENTRAL. In the list of indictments reported by the Grand Jury yesterday and chronicled in our Court record this morning, is one against the Maine Central Railroad Company for causing the death of Dr. A. J. Pickard, of Carmel. The particulars of the sad accident are well remembered. The unfortunate man while crossing the track in his sleigh near Carmel station in the early evening some weeks ago was struck by a locomotive and instantly killed. Financially Embarassed

The Sebec Woolen Company Fails with Quite Large Liabilities.

Several attachments have recently been placed on the property of the Sebec Woolen Company by New York, Boston and Bangor parties, and yesterday the failure of the company was announced. The liabilities are about $30,000, and the assets are estimated to be in the vicinity of $3,000, although it is difficult at present to judge correctly.

The Sebec Woolen Company was organized about three years ago, with Wm Scott, Oliver Young and John R. Pollock, all of Guilford, as stockholders, each putting in $1,000, making a capital of only $3,000. Wm. Scott and Oliver Young removed to Sebec, and the former assumed the duties of agent of the company and the latter that of Treasurer. Pollock subsequently sold his third to Wm. P. Appleyard, of Guilford, who holds it now. The mill was run first on repellants, then for some time on cassimeres, and during the past six months blankets have been manufactured almost entirely. Converse, Stanton & Davis have been the Boston agents for the sale of the goods made at the Sebec mill.

A large majority of the indebtedness is held by Massachusetts parties. The Bangor creditors are Jefferson Crocker, Samuel A. Maxfield and Wheelwright, Clark & Co. Mr Crocker had due him for wool sold the company $2 755, and Mr. Maxfield also for wool sold, had about $1,400 due him. The largest stockholders outside of the State were the Monument Mills of Housatonic, Mass., (about $6,000) Wm Scott, of Boston, (nearly $5,000) Phipps, Boyd & Co, Boston, H. C. Thatcher & Co, Boston, and Jacob Bacon & Sons, New York.

A meeting of the creditors will be arranged at an early date, and in the meantime the mill will continue in operation. An effort looking to a settlement is in progress and the company have offered to pay 12 cents on the dollar in 60 days. Henry Hudson, Esq, counsel for the company, is now in the city.

SWEET PRINCIPLE OF FRUITS AND PLANTS.

[Essay by James E. Nichols before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, at Boston, Feb. 2.]

If studying the sweet principle of plants we soon discover that they possess the capability of elaborating more than one variety of sugar, and that there is a curious blending of several forms in the ripened fruits which come to our tables. In beet roots, in the stems and trunk of the sugar maple tree, the sycamore, the palm, in sugar canes, in the sorghum plant, in the stalk of maize, in grasses, we have one kind of sugar called sucrose, which is the sweetest variety; in grapes we have another distinct variety, called dextrose or glucose; in apples and other fruits we have still another, called fructose or levulose. In melons we have a sweet which is nearly pure sucrose or cane sugar. In that vegetable monstrosity called a beet, which is hidden from the clear sunlight and the air during the whole period of its growth, there are found juices which hold the most noble and valued form of sugar known to man, and millions of pounds find their way into commerce, always commanding the highest prices. The humble, earthy beet can hold up its head with pride when its sweetness is contrasted with that of the petted grape, which occupies the foremost place among our delicious fruits. The grape is sweetened with glucose, an ignoble form of sugar, which the chemist can make in the laboratory. The chemist can make the sweet juices of the grape from old cotton rags and old newspaper, and if this statement does not indicate a sufficiently low origin, we have only to state it can be made from common sawdust as well. But human art has not been able to number among its triumphs the production of the sugar of the beet, the maple or the cane.

Not one of the fruits in their wild or native state holds any considerable quantity of sugar of any kind—not enough to make them acceptable to the taste or to fit them to serve as foods. It is only by skilful cultivation, by hybridizing, by budding and grafting, that we have secured the sweet principle in fruits. The beet, for example, under ordinary care, will afford from four to six per cent of sugar, but by scientific and generous culture the percentage can be nearly or quite doubled. The speaker has succeeded in increasing the sweet principle in apples, grapes and peaches by cultivation and fertilization, and this when it was originally present in normal quantity. In increasing the sugar, we also increase every other desirable quality, for one principle cannot be forced into prominence without being accompanied by all the others.

Dr Nichols explained the chemical constitution of sugar, starch and cellulose, all of which are classed as carbo hydrates. Cane sugar is a combination of water with carbon—absolutely pure water with the elements of a diamond. Starch can be transformed into glucose by the addition of one molecule of water, but the glucose cannot be transformed into sucrose. A potato is but a mass of starch, which can be changed almost entirely into sugar. When starch is changed into sugar it requires the aid of diastase, which is a starch solvent provided for a specific purpose. Sugar cane two weeks before it is ripe contains no sugar, after it is ripe it contains no starch. Sugar is not an exhaustive product, the refuse from the manufacture of beet sugar returns all inorganic matters to the soil.

There is nothing more wonderful in nature than the persistency with which vegetable structures adhere to their original bent or design. We all know that two trees growing side by side from the same soil, breathing the same air, and precisely alike in external and internal substance, will produce fruit totally dissimilar in chemical constituents and physical appearance. If a young sour apple tree is cut off low in its trunk and scions of another kind are inserted, it is changed only above the point where they are placed. The chemical reactions below continue true to the original instinct, and if fruit comes from a sprout it is charged with the acid juices of the parent stem. We have thus the bewildering fact brought before us that the sap circulating through one portion of a tree culminates in the production of excess of acid in the fruit, while in another there is found an excess of sugar. It is not unusual to observe a newly set scion bud, blossom and bear fruit the first year. The fruit may weigh ten times as much as the frail scion which held it up and supplied the nutriment necessary for its growth, but the little twig, transplanted to an alien limb, will set up a laboratory of its own, and from the strange juices brought to it will manufacture fruit totally dissimilar to its companion fruits growing in close proximity. An example of this nature was afforded in the orchard of the speaker, when from a scion having a surface for cell action of only nine square inches, a sweet apple was grown weighing seven ounces, and affording from its juices thirty-three grains of fruit sugar.

Dr Nichols next gave some results of analysis of apples, with a view to ascertain their great value as food, from which it appears that in a bushel of ripe Hubbardston Nonsuches there is about six pounds of soluble nutritive material, in Rhode Island Greenings about seven pounds, and in Baldwins about five pounds, and this material will vary to a considerable extent in value. These results agree with practical experience in feeding apples to animals. When fed in connection with meal they serve to give zest to the appetite, and to keep the animals in health. If cooked their value is much increased.

Dr Nichols had never found nitrogenous manures to exert any marked specific influence upon fruit crops. They may need nitrogen, but the spontaneous supply in soil is fully equal to the comparatively small amounts required. But there is one mineral element which may be said to be the pabulum par excellence of growing fruits, and that is potash. We certainly cannot raise perfect fruits if we withhold this element from our orchard soils. When it is considered that we influence growing fruits only through the art of rendering the tree or vine vigorous and healthy, and when we further consider how much potash is required to maintain a normal condition in large fruit trees which are constantly under the pruning saw and knife, we obtain some correct views of the importance of this agent in soils. Both the vine and its fruit are great consumers of potash, as are also most of our small or soft fruits.

It is not usually advisable to attempt to reclaim a worn-out grape border, but if any success is obtainable, it is through a plentiful supply of wood ashes and bone meal. For new borders also, plenty of these materials is desirable, and it is better to place the fertilizing substances in successive layers rather than in the usual form of a mixed heap. The saccharine qualities of the Black Hamburg and Frontignan grapes are greatly improved by plentiful supplies of potash, and wood ashes is the best source of this alkali. The German chlorides are next to be preferred, but they do not give the desirable results of wood ashes. The German kainit salts, the speaker thought poisonous to soils. He recommended as the best fertilizer for fruits and most cereal crops, a mixture of finely ground fresh bones and good wood ashes—six barrels of the former and twelve of the latter, to be well mixed together on a shed floor, adding during the mixing twenty buckets of water and one barrel of gypsum or plaster. This may be allowed to stand a few weeks or may be used at once if needed. If permitted to stand it heats from chemical action, and the freed ammonia is in part fixed as a sulphate by the plaster, but not all of it. When the German chlorides are used instead of ashes the compost may be extended with muck. Until lately he had been unable to procure the Charleston phosphate nodules ground fine, but they are now sold in the form of an impalpable powder, and he had used them with considerable success in place of ground bones. The value of nitrogenous manure is unsettled, and he thought we had considerable to unlearn in regard to it.

Marshall P. Wilder spoke of the possibility of producing sugar in quantity from sorghum on our own soil, in which he fully believed. It has been stated that sorghum sugar cannot be crystalized, but it is now a settled fact that it can.

THE STEAM MAN.

CAPTAIN ROWE'S INVENTION IS NO MORE.

[Philadelphia Press.]

The steam man is no more. His inventor and master, Captain Rowe, became enraged a few weeks ago because of his pupil's intractability and struck him a fatal blow in the temple, crushing in his skull and causing his vapory brains to fly the air for yards around. He fell on the ground gave one heartrending whistle through his iron nose, and then slowly puffed his life away. Various causes are assigned for the steam man's untimely demise. He had been built by Captain Rowe at the corner of Marshall and Willow streets after years of patient thought and persistent labor, and when completed, appeared as a wonderful libel on real humanity. His head was large, and the width and depth of his forehead indicated great intelligence. His body was well-rounded, symmetrical and powerful, while his arms were exaggerated imitations of the arms of a powerful blacksmith. The legs of the steam man were marvels of inventive genius. They were joined at hip, knee and ankle, and were intended to chase the luminous piece of mechanism to walk and run and trot as naturally as a human being.

Soon after finishing the work of almost half a lifetime, Captain Rowe gave a private exhibition at Manayunk. The steam man was generously fed with a diet of wood, coal and water, and then, to conform with the laws of his peculiar organism, a blazing torch was applied to this seemingly indigestible food. It took ten minutes or more for the steam man to exhibit signs of life after flooding the meal. Then his big eyes began to glow, his breath came with a long, powerful respiration, his chest heaved and he stretched his off leg as though proud of his power. Captain Rowe came forward and pressed a lever located on the steam man's stomach. With a shrill shriek of delight the iron pupil stepped out with a firm tread, and, after going a few steps, paused, and began to breathe very hard. Captain Rowe became slightly irritated and gave the lever another turn, whereupon the man lifted his left foot and made a vicious kick at his master.

Captain Rowe at once saw that his pupil wanted water, and in order not to cool him off too suddenly, administered a small drink of twelve gallons. This appeared to please the man for a few moments and he breathed forth a fiery cloud of thanks. Again was the lever manipulated, again did the curious being start forward, this time waving his arms and shouting loudly. Captain Rowe was standing a few feet in advance, and in attempting to get out of the way, he stumbled. The next instant the man was on top of him and had given him a stunning blow in the chest with his iron arm. The captain, who is a large powerful man and somewhat impulsive, got angry and aimed a blow at his pupil's nose. It was countered very cleverly, and the man struck the captain on the chin. Captain Rowe saw that to stand in front would be placing him off at an immense disadvantage, and, almost blind with rage he jumped nimbly aside, seized a club and struck the steam man in the head, knocking him "silly."

The unfortunate creature trembled from head to foot, and then went down all in a heap. Not content with having killed his intractable pupil, Captain Rowe attacked him as he lay prostrate and broke him into small pieces. The remains of the defunct steam magnet are now in the queer looking boat, that the captain calls his home now lying on the Schuylkill bank, near Wissahickon landing. The disconsolate house was found yesterday afternoon in charge of the captain's children, and his eldest boy expressed his opinion that the steam man would never be resurrected. He added the further information that his father is now confining his attention to the construction of a steam carriage. The latter invention is housed in part of a shed on a vacant lot at Ninth street and Girard avenue.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. J. F. Wilds (well known city missionary in New York and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

Newark, N. J., Aug. 16, 1882.

Last winter I was troubled with most uncomfortable feelings in my stomach, especially after eating. I grew so miserably ill at times, I thought seriously of giving up my work. I also became very much reduced in flesh and strength. I was a sufferer for a very short time after commencing to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, before I began to experience relief from my distress. In a few weeks I was entirely restored to health, and have remained so ever since. My appetite is now natural, my food is digested, and I sleep well. My strength has greatly improved, and I am able to perform double the amount of labor I could before taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I recommend with full confidence as the best blood medicine ever discovered. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I prize these facts as your services, hoping their publication may be of good.

Yours respectfully, J. F. WILDS.

The above statement is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all those scrofulous troubles arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

ELIXIR

For the cure of Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and all diseases of the Throat, Chest, and Lungs.

In all cases where this Elixir is used its efficacy is at once manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to. At its commencement it is but a slight irritation of the membranous lining which covers the lungs, then an inflamation, when the cough is rather dry, local fever, and the pulse more regular, the cheeks flushed and chill more common. This Virility in curing the above complaints operates so as to remove all nearly-held irritations and inflammation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough, and makes the breath long easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiates and astringent articles, which are of so dangerous a nature as to endanger the power of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but by removing the matter, consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well.
